To ensure the best fit select a belt that is two inches larger than you pant size. If you are between sizes or an odd numbered size choose the next size up.

Pant sizes vary greatly between brands and cannot be used to determine belt size accurately.

The only way to ensure you are purchasing the correct belt size is to measure a belt that currently fits you as shown in the photo above.
You are measuring from the spot where the prong touches the buckle to the hole you are using to fasten your belt, today.

If the measurement is an even number, that is your size. If the measurement is an odd number, round up to the next even number.

From the photo above, this person would order a size 32 belt for a perfect fit.
(measured 31" to the current hole and rounded up to the next even number)
